RECENT PROPAGANDISTIC TV ADS SPONSORED BY A COALITION OF MID-SIZED INSURERS HAVE CONTRIBUTED TO THE IMPRESSION THAT ALL INSURERS ARE OPPOSED TO THE CLINTON HEALTH CARE PLAN...

--WHICH MAY EXPLAIN WHY A CANADIAN-STYLE SYSTEM--WHICH WOULD ELIMINATE ALL PRIVATE HEALTH INSURERS--ISN'T EVEN BEING CONSIDERED... INTERESTINGLY, ONE OF THE CANADIANS' BIGGEST PROBLEMS IS THE NUMBER OF AMERICANS SNEAKING INTO THEIR HOSPITALS FOR FREE CARE.*

IN REALITY, THE NATION'S FIVE LARGEST INSURERS--AETNA, CIGNA, PRUDENTIAL, MET LIFE AND TRAVELLERS--ACTUALLY HELPED WRITE THE CLINTON PLAN--

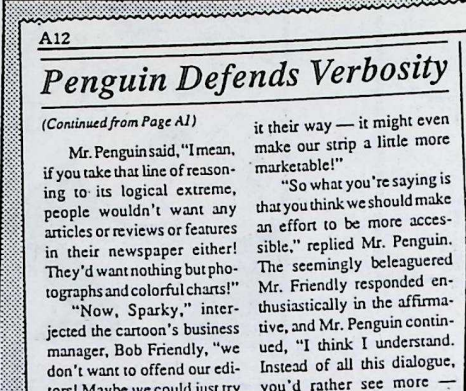

ADDING SOME LEVITY TO ALL THIS CONFUSION ARE THOSE WACKY REPUBLICANS...WHOSE CURRENT ARGUMENTS SEEM TO BE PATTERNED AFTER GEORGE BUSH'S FAMOUS "RECESSION? WHAT RECESSION?" STRATEGY...

TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT by L.M. Boyd

Q. What's the greenish color around the yolk of a hard-boiled egg?
A. Sulfur and iron compounds formed by overcooking.

In Shakespeare's England, people could use eels for money.

If you've held eight jobs by the time you're 40, you're typical, says an employment researcher.

Albert Einstein said, "Nationalism is an infantile disease. It is the measles of mankind."

Research suggests that most people have a hard time grasping that the inside of the sun rotates six times faster than the outside of the sun.

Q. Back in the bare-knuckle boxing days, how long did the rounds last?

A. As long as both fighters were on their feet. When one fighter hit the dirt, he had 30 seconds to rest, plus eight seconds to get up to the scratch line drawn across the center of the ring. If he didn't make it in the 38 seconds, it was said he was "knocked out of time." That's where we got "knocked out." It's also where we got "starting from scratch."

If you've been married to the same partner for more than seven years, your chances of staying married are better than average.

One person in 20 never catches a cold.

The fingernails of some people contain certain minerals, chemicals and dyes that absorb enough ultra violet light to glow in the dark.

A student of print periodicals tells us that people in the United States now are less frequently called "citizens" than "consumers."

Q. What's the show time, not counting commercials, of a half-hour TV sitcom?

A. Two acts, each 11 minutes.

More people use blue toothbrushes than red toothbrushes.

Rarely do you see on the on those lists of "greatest inventions" one some say belongs there: The American Public Library system.

Now on the market in Tokyo, I'm told, are toupées for dachshunds.

A baby giraffe grows an inch a day.

Q. In all those wagon train trips westward in the frontier years, how many pioneers were actually killed in battles with Native Americans?

A. Between 300 and 400.

Nothing in Major League baseball rules say a bat can't weigh as much as 100 pounds.

There was a time in London, England, when letter carriers delivered mail 12 times a day.

In a later crew of Columbus was one Rodrigo de Jerez, said to have been the first European of record to smoke tobacco. Back home, astonished witnesses told the Inquisitors they'd seen a man blowing smoke out his nose, and the Inquisitors promptly threw him in the dungeon as an agent of the Devil.

All kangaroos cough when frightened.

Researchers reveal that females who make New Year's resolutions outnumber males who do so by about two to one.

Before ancient Egyptians kept household cats, they kept household weasels.

A Wells Fargo circular 100 years ago warned passengers it was absolutely forbidden to discuss stagecoach robberies or Indian uprisings. Not unlike today's airline ban on any talk of hijacking.

The first voice to be broadcast on radio around the world belonged to C.D. Wagoner of Schenectady, N.Y.

People have been killed by avalanches even though the plunging snows stopped before reaching them. Compressed air ahead of an avalanche can kill too.

Q. You said aluminum heals itself after it's scratched. How?

A. Aluminum oxide grows sideways to fill the gouge, and keeps on growing until the scratch is covered and sealed.

The world's longest underground railroad is in New York City. It's the subway system -- 722 miles long.

JOE BOB BRIGGS

Everybody's getting ready for the Big Hoo-haw Celebration of the Year 2000, when the fundamentalists think the world is gonna explode, and the New Agers think we'll be transported into Oz, and most people think we'll just get another boring Republican president.

But everybody thinks something will happen, or at least it's important that we realize that it's 2,000 years after the birth of Christ — even the people who don't believe in Christ. In fact, some people don't even call it the year 2000 A.D., which stands for "Anno Domini," which means "The Year of The Lord." They've started using 2000 C.E., which means "Common Era." To which I say, if they're gonna change it, couldn't they come up with something a little more snazzy? "Common Era." It sounds like a lazy teenager's name for it. "I guess I'll lie here on the couch today — it's just another day in the Common Era."

So anyhow, the idea of the year 2000 got me to wondering what they did to celebrate the year 1000. After all, if you're into numbers, that celebration should be a bigger deal than the second thousand years.

In fact, why don't we ever talk about the first thousand years after Christ?

Most of us act like history starts in the year 1776. Some of us are willing to go back to 1619, or 1607. People in England go back to 1066. But when it comes to those first thousand years, we just don't think about it. (I won't even mention the years before Christ. For the last ten years, they've been trying to get all the classical Greek and Roman writers kicked out of the college curriculum.)

But the people who were living in the year 1000, they had to think about it. And if they thought about it, they probly thought:

Wow! A lotta water under the bridge. A thousand years ago, the Romans were killing the Christians. Then 700 years ago a Roman emperor became a Christian. Then about 600 years ago the Romans started killing the non-Christians. Then about 300 years ago the Romans and the Greeks divided up into two different Christian churches. The Goths came out of nowhere and took over half of Europe. The Huns came out of nowhere and went back to nowhere. We had the Avars, the Bulgars, the Persians, we probly had five million people die in various wars. We had nine or ten plagues, we had the Franks take over everything under Charlemagne. There was that time when North Africa was the center of civilization. We had religious wars, land wars, family wars, wars with barbarians. In fact, so much has happened, and so many empires have come and gone, and everything is so totally changed, that it makes you grateful to live in the modern year 1000, when everything is finally settled and peaceful, and whatever you are — a Persian or a Khazar or a Roman or a Bulgar tribesman — at least you're safe from having your whole civilization destroyed. In fact, let's plant a little marker here on the square of Ctesiphon, the most famous city in the East, and a thousand years from now all the citizens of Ctesiphon will remember us and know that we made it all possible.

I imagine it was something like that, anyhow.

EARTHWEEK: A DIARY OF THE PLANET

By Steve Newman

Famine

Three months of drought has brought a million people in parts of Kenya and Ethiopia to the brink of famine. Seven people have already died of starvation, and others have resorted to searching for wild berries and roots to survive. Officials fear that 250,000 head of cattle will die in Kenya's Kajiado District unless rains arrive by the end of March. The presence of about 400,000 refugees from Somalia, Ethiopia, and Sudan has made the food crisis in Kenya even more acute.

Enduring Winter

Old-timers in the northern U.S. and eastern Canada once claimed that "winters these days aren't what they used to be." You won't hear much talk like that any more — the region is reeling from yet another arctic blast. Freezing rain and heavy snow wreaked havoc with highway and air travel, and generally made life miserable from the Rockies to the Atlantic.

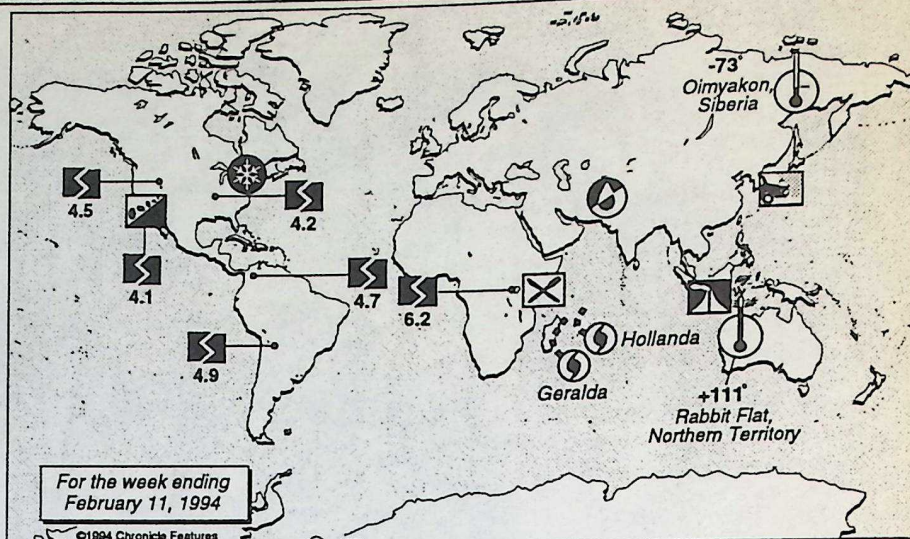

The most persistent frigid weather since 1978 has left much of the Great Lakes covered with an unusually thick layer of ice.

Earthquakes

The strongest quake to strike the Great Rift Valley in Uganda since 1966 left 12 people dead and 200 others injured. The pre-dawn quake also rocked eastern Zaire, and was followed by numerous aftershocks.

Frightening seismic echoes of the devastating Southern California temblor continued to rattle nerves around the Los Angeles Basin. In the northern Rocky Mountains, swarms of tremors were felt widely along the border region of Idaho and Wyoming.

Movements also were felt in Missouri and Illinois, northern Colombia, and the Chile-Bolivia border.

Opium Drought

A prolonged dry spell in Pakistan has withered most of the country's huge illegal opium crop. "This was help from God, but we will not pray for it to come again because it also destroys other crops," Interior Minister Naseerullah Khan Babar told a news conference. The drought has destroyed 80 percent of the poppy crop from which opium is produced in the semi-autonomous North West Frontier tribal region.

Volcano

Indonesia's Mount Semeru erupted 18 times, forcing 1,500 people to flee their homes in East Java. Five people were killed in the initial eruptions. Police said that those displaced may be unable to return home for some time due to fears that rainstorms could send volcanic debris and mud cascading down the mountain, covering their homes.

Aftermath

Mud slides joined the host of other natural disasters to strike coastal areas of Southern California in recent months. Rainfall from a potent Pacific cold front unleashed gushes of mud, burying cars on the Pacific Coast Highway and pouring through homes in the celebrity-packed community of Malibu.

Tropical Storms

The death toll in the wake of cyclone Geralda rose to 70 as Madagascar began its cleanup following the worst such storm this century. Geralda left a trail of destruction in the port of Toamasina on the east coast, wrecking nearly 80 percent of the buildings. Approximately 150,000 people were made homeless by the cyclone.

Tropical cyclone Hollanda formed over the northeastern Indian Ocean, then veered into open waters before reaching Mauritius.

Smog Filters

The air quality along highways in Osaka, Japan's second-largest city, has become so poor that the regional government plans to build a giant vacuum cleaner to suck up the automobile exhaust and purify it. The Japan Times reported that the proposed device would consist of a roadside duct 10 feet in diameter, and electric fans to draw the air into an underground tunnel outfitted with huge filters. After filtration, the air would pass through a chamber where bacteria is to separate nitrogen dioxide into nitrogen and oxygen before the purer air is released. A prototype is expected to be built sometime after April. Without such drastic action, air pollution levels at eight sites in the region will exceed government standards by 1999.

THE SPORTS BOOK OF NOSTRADAMUS

by Leo T. Baldwin

Michelle de Nostredame was born on December 14, 1503. He is known to us as "Nostradamus — the seer, the celestial prophet, the man who saw the future." This is a load of crap. Nostradamus was a gifted prognosticator, sure. But he employed his great gift solely to forecast professional sports.

Few people realize what a sports nut Nostradamus was. His mother once found him swinging a stick at a butternut and muttering, "The Babe promised a boy in the hospital he'd hit a homer for him, and now he's done it! The crowd's going crazy!" Mrs. Nostradamus had no idea what this meant, but we can make no mistake.

By the age of 18, Nostradamus was an accomplished bowler and pool player. He once ran three racks in a game of billiards against Catherine de Medici, a feat that would have earned a lesser man a beheading. These are facts conveniently overlooked by the pseudo-intellectuals who have worked so hard to make Nostradamus into something he never was.

Nostradamus wrote his predictions in a type of verse called a quatrain — a four-line poem. It's certainly no coincidence that baseball has four bases, and football is played in four quarters with four downs. Golfers yell "fore" prior to striking the ball. It's well-known that Nostradamus hated hockey, which is played in three periods.

At this point we should illustrate a few examples of Nostradamus' great gifts. Take this quatrain:

Before long everything will be organized.

We await a very evil century:

The lot of the masked and solitary one greatly changed,

Few will be found who wish to stay in their places.

The first line clearly refers to the upcoming realignment of the American and National leagues into three divisions. The "evil century" in line two foretells the implementation of the designated hitter rule and inter-league play. The "masked and solitary one greatly changed" is a reference to the late Thurman Munson (catcher for the Yankees), who nobody really liked, but everybody felt bad when he got killed. "Few will be found who wish to stay in their places": I hate free agency; you hate free agency; Nostradamus hated free agency.

It's so sad that nobody was paying attention to Nostradamus when the World Series opened in Candlestick Park on October 17, 1989. A lot of anguish might have been avoided:

Earth shaking from the center of the Earth

Will cause the towers (light stands) around the New City (the Giants moved to San Francisco in 1958) to shake:

Two great rocks will war for a long time (a reference to the delay of the "Fall Classic"),

And then Arethus will color a new river red
(I'll get back to you on this one).

There will be a tremendous earthquake;

The great theater filled (with fans) will be ruined (almost).

The plight of the Boston Red Sox seems to have been one of Nostradamus' special concerns. Tom Yawkey's death and the suffering of his widow, Jean, who took over sole ownership after his passing, is wrapped up in a neat package and presented to us with a great big red bow in this quatrain:

Her husband first extinguished on the bed of honor:

For seven years she will weep with grief (the '86 Series),

Then a long life and good fortune for the Kingdom.

Who could forget the picture of Jean Yawkey in the Red Sox locker room waiting for the presentation of the World Series trophy — a trophy that never came? I still haven't gotten over it. The last line of this prophecy might lead us to believe that better days lie ahead for Sox fans. Unfortunately, in this case "Kingdom" refers to heaven, or the afterlife. Meaning: the only relief for followers of the Crimson Hose is death.

Finally, this example — also familiar to Boston sports fans:

The year the great seventh number is accomplished

Appearing at the time of the games of slaughter,

Not far from the age of the great millennium

When the dead will come out of their graves.

This can only mean: "Here's the inbounds pass, and Havlicek steals it! Havlicek steals the ball! Havlicek stole the ball!! John Havlicek stole the ball!!!"

Countless references to other sports abound in the teachings of Nostradamus, but unfortunately our space is limited. I'll leave you with a final amazing incident, when Nostradamus lay on his deathbed. His lifelong friend, Chuck, was with him and wrote in his diary later: "As the moment of death approached, Michelle — the great Nostradamus, who once bowled a 299 -- called me close to him. In a voice I could barely hear, he whispered, 'If the Bills play in the Super Bowl, bet the over.' What could this mean? Truly this was a mysterious man!"

Truly. In January, I won fifty bucks betting the over.

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

Thirty years had passed, and although he had no real regrets about marrying Wendy, buying a home and having two kids, Peter found his thoughts often going back to his life in Never-Never-Land.

"What a find, Ms. Dinkins! ... It's Mailman, all right — but remarkably, this specimen is fully intact, with his Canus nipponicus still attached!"

For the most part, the meeting was quite successful. Only a slight tension filled the air, stemming from the unforeseen faux pas of everyone wearing the same dress.

I do NOT BELIEVE in LINEAR TIME. THERE IS NO PAST AND FUTURE: ALL IS ONE, AND EXISTENCE IN THE TEMPORAL SENSE IS ILLUSORY. THIS QUESTION, THEREFORE, IS MEANINGLESS AND IMPOSSIBLE TO ANSWER.

Leold

by Roger Salloom

My friend Normie had a talent for finding money. He'd save up and take us out for burgers and chips all the time.

He was depressed a lot. So, he'd mope around with his head hanging down ...looking down, and he'd find money just sitting on the ground. Wow.

I saw him yesterday. He said for about a year his cousin has been making him go to therapy.

He's pretty happy nowadays but doesn't have as much money.

I should be thankful I'm miserable.

I could be broke.
